Success Story

The Social Security Administration offices had a complex and potentially dangerous air quality problem. Never before had the SSA required this type of specialized environmental of service - and the project had to be done right and on time for the organization to function. Criterion put its team of experts to the task testing, analyzing and delivering the right solution to solve the problem. Criterion accomplished the project with zero impact on the staff and completed the survey and remediation so mission critical services could continue uninterrupted. In fact, Criterion's highly trained staff completed the project without a hitch, ahead of schedule and below budget.
